

South Pasadena Review

THURSDAY, MAY 8, 2014

Many Come Out to Support of Big Event

Mission Street and other parts of the city, especially around the Gold Line Metro Station and the local library, came alive Saturday night as a large crowd turned out for the 6th annual South Pasadena Eclectic Music Festival & Art Walk.

The full afternoon and evening of entertainment was presented by the South Pasadena Chamber of Commerce.

The Eclectic Festival featured more than 40 musical artists performing at a variety of venues.

The free festival was an easy walk for the large crowd, with most of the action on Mission Street, along with some side streets near the Gold Line Mission Station and on Fair Oaks Avenue.

An outdoor wine and beer garden was set up at the Gold Line Station. In addition, there was plenty of pizza, beer and wine could be found at the Emerging Artists Stage at Burke Triolo Studio at 538 Mission Street.

Many galleries and studios displayed works of renowned and local artists while local merchants hosted open houses long into the night.

The South Pasadena Eclectic Music Festival & Art Walk is staged by and for the local businesses as a celebration of the arts.

SHOWING HER ARTWORK – Leisa Collins, the artist behind Leisa Collins Studio, shows her paintings. Her studio can be found at 812 Fremont Avenue, Loft 101.